

Register Now for the 2008 Summer Institute

Public Health in the 21st Century: New Challenges. New Tools.

Interact, engage and connect at this year's Summer Institute, August 11-15 at the University of Washington. More...

Public health experts on climate change, the built environment, and communicable disease will share their valuable experience and knowledge during morning plenary sessions. More...

Multiple program tracks including Program Planning and Evaluation, Health Communication, and Epidemiology are designed to educate, inspire and energize. More...

Institute directors and faculty share a wealth of knowledge and field experience. More...

Stretch your legs on a tour of Seattle's High Point neighborhood. Protecting the environment and promoting the public's health are integral aspects of this new community. Register early to secure your place on the tour. More...

Register by June 11
and save money!

More...

Events

05-20-2008 Northwest Tribal Emergency Management Council: Building Systems through Partnerships Hot Topics Web conferencing

06-09-2008 Montana Public Health Summer Institute Great Falls, MT

06-24-2008 Public Health and the History of Disaster Hot Topics Web conferencing

07-15-2008 How Wise Are You? The National Library of Medicine's Preparedness and Response Resources Hot Topics Web conferencing

News

NWCPHP collaborated with Public Health - Seattle & King County to design a user-friendly online workbook, Business Resiliency for Health Care Providers. This valuable resource is free and helps non-hospital health care providers, such as nursing homes and mental health clinics, plan for emergencies so that they can continue to provide services during disasters.

The Spring/Summer 2008 issue of Northwest Public Health looks at the social determinants of obesity. More...

Archives of our Hot Topics in Preparedness forums, including the popular "Dead or Alive: Managing Both in Mass Fatality Incidents," are available any time on our Hot Topics page.